THE RAID INTO MARTLAND.

The farmers in Lowell county who are in correspondence with the rebels, asserted that the invading column consists of three divisions under Gen. Early, humbering perhaps 25,000 men all told, and that only one of these divisions marched as far as Harper's Ferry, the rest of the force remaining at Front Royal. It is thought by our officers that these figures are exaggerated.

In a recent fight with Moeby, at Aldie, Major Forbes, son of John M. Forbes of the 2nd Massachusetts envalry, and Lieutenant Ewing and Captain Humphreys, of a New York regiment, were taken prisoners.

Capt. Stone, of the 2nd Massachusetts, was shot in the small of the back. We lost eleven men killed, and the rebels are supposed to have lost a larger number.

Our detachment was considerably inferior in numbers to the rebel force.

This afternoon the reser arrance mace an effort to gain the bridge over the Monceacy, near Frederick. Gen. Wallace, with only a small portion of his force, moved out to theck them. A Rebel View of the Raid, [Correspondence of the Read.

[Correspondence of the New York World.]

BALTINORS, June S.

WHAT THE REPLES HAVE DONS.

The rebels, on yesterday aftermoon, were in full possession not only of Martinsburg, but also of the railroad from that place to Harper's Ferry, and for a distance of ten miles north of Martinsburg, and, in fact, of the whole country between 'Winchester and Williamsport, on the Potomac river. What damage they have done to the railroad has not yet been ascertained. If they have not it badly destroyed 'it, it is owing solely to their forbearance. There was shout a million dollars' worth of commissary and quartermaster's stores, and other government property, at Martinsburg, and five hundred thousand dollars' worth of commissary and quartermaster's stores, and other government property, at Martinsburg, and five hundred thousand dollars' worth of private stores. These, of course, are all gone. The wayon trains of General Hunter's division, which he left at Martinsburg in General Sigel's charge, also fell into the hands of the enemy.

WHAT WILL THE MEMBLE DO?

There are no means of knowing yet what they will do. They will not attack Harper's Ferry unless they are in very strong force, or unless there are more of them coming up. In the latter case they will no doubt do so. But from all I can learn, the force at Martinsburg is amisil, composed of Imboden's cavalry alone. But there are indications that there is a much larger force behind. One report states that Breckinridge's division is at Winchester, and that the corps of Evell and Early are at Strasburg, marching up the valley. If this report proves to be true, speculation may be set at rest at to the design of the movement. If is, in that case, the northern movement of General Lee, so long ago forenshowed. It is the long-expected invasion of the North; and Baltimore first, and afterwards Washington, are the objects that will be aimed at.

What is the bill before is? I want to inquire of honorable members of this Honse what is it proposed we shall enact into a law? What rights of our constituents are we called apon to vote a way to day, and what additional obligations, if any are we to load them down with in the passage of this bill? Of course it is to be presumed that we are all familiar with he vastir important subject apon which we are called upon to pass. In the course I am to take in this matter I am not to be misunderstood, and I presume other gentlemes do not wish to be misunderstood. The subject of a Pacific railroad is one-of great interest to the public. I am the oddest friend of the measure on this floor. since it has been before Congress, and voted for it in every shape in which it has been presented. It has been a plank in the platform of the party o which I have the honor to belong. The great work of uniting the Atlantic coast with the Pacific ceas, and binding the patriotic, loyal, and enterprising people of the western coast to us on this side I have always considered as worthy of a great mation like ours and of the times in which we live. But as a Representative it is my duty to look well to the means by which the object in to be accomplished. Because I am in favor of building a road, it does not follow that I am to squander the means of the Government without any security that the work will be done. The interests involved are of such atapendous magnitude as to demand the most vigitant watchfulness on the part of the Government, and if we here fail to goard them we fail in a great duty to the country. If we do not place the guards that are necessary for protection of the Government, the whole work will be exposed to successful attacks, and the object of the whole campaign, may fail after involving us in a ruinous expense.

When those cannons spoke.

Scorching hot, from their grinning jaws,
with a shour;
Came the wharling who;
And the bursting shell;
And the pressing shell;
And the grew gray.
With the drifting emoka.
That universed und broke.
And anaged and fell,
When the poer burst out,
And Taken.

And Death rode over the lattice field.

Like the withering breath of a curse;
And his voice win out.

With a shrill report.

When the ridge shashed
And the layoust gashed

And the layoust gashed

And the kille struck home.

Up through the smale and the driving sho
And the strife,
Ring the bugle notes counting a charge;
And the spars strifer does,
And neary as pruigs,
With a feer ining short,
With a feer ining short,
For the charty in an eyes,
At the focusin's life,

At the Bounan's He.

Still are the guns, for a spice, as though
Without breats:
And our men, as gularity down.
With unbriders rank.
And a shout for the "Blare."
There's a swift, bright flash
From the guns, and a crash,
And the red earth jess.
Neath the shander of death.

And meny a brave boy ful when that fire Borst out.
